As To The Opening Of School

Ogden opens today.

As I walk up State street, I notice the attitude of the various boys that I see around me.

One group is gathered around a tall, muscular-built boy. As they slowly approach the corner, I can hear rather frequent mention of football. One wants to know about the coach, another about the number of letter men that are coming back.

Passing this group, I approach another. The chief figure of this crowd is holding forth on the prospects of an orchestra.

A tall youth, wearing spectacles, is holding the attention of a bunch around the gate with an account of how he "got by" one of the professors last year.

Ogden opens today.

The bell rings, and they all troop in to chapel.

Again I am interested in the different reactions of the various boys. Some sit like dumb beasts awaiting the slaughter. Others are scattered around in groups of three or four each. These groups are, apparently, self-centered. But the largest of these is composed of Freshmen. Stepping over, I find the topic under consideration is that of the best method of organization. This must be done at once, if the very complex rights of the Freshmen are to be properly looked after. A good sized bunch is centered around an animated boy in grey. This group is discussing the all absorbing topic of football. Suddenly, a rather stout young man steps up and asks about the school paper. Then, in the midst of the ensuing storm of protest, in walks the President.

Ogden opens today.

The President says that he hopes the boys will get along well with the Faculty. That the prospects are good, and that the standard of work has been raised. Also the course has been stiffened by the addition of some new subjects.

Football Season Opens Chapel "Sings"

Prove Popular

The opening of the Ogden College likewise marked the opening of her football training season. At the first call for Varsity candidates, thirty-one students reported for practice. All of these men are working hard under the leadership of Mr. Allen Thornton, former University of Virginia star. Mr. Thornton has consented to give his time and valuable assistance toward the making of a successful "Grid" team at Ogden. He, with the aid of Mr. Lucius Squires and Mr. Gus Thornton, are getting the candidates in shape for the coming season.

Wonderful spirit is being shown by the faculty and student body. Those who are unable to go out for the team are assisting in every possible way in order that little old Ogden may have a winning team.

Several old players have returned and are displaying the same ability that made last year's team famous. The old stars that are back are; Porter Lindsay, Smith, J., Vale, Pickles, McNally, Thomas, Hill, Williams, Fitch, Spillman, and Shelton. Among the new candidates that are showing up well are; Thornton, McGinley, Cole, Huffman, Eisenhart, Kinslow, Jackson, Brashear, Amos, Carmichael and Lashmit.

A Description

He is a rather small boy. In fact, he wears short trousers. These trousers are so short that they only come to his knees. He usually wears a blue slip-over sweater, tan trousers, tan shirt and a military hat. This hat is always worn at a 'devil may care' angle. This youth has sandy hair. His features are open, but rather cockey. As would be expected, he has a very large mouth. And, what is worse, he has a voice that is, if any difference, a size too large for that mouth. But to cap the climax, he thinks that he is the original "funny guy", so those in his presence must always hear his continual chatter.

Prof. Hilary, the popular language instructor, has introduced a new feature into the Chapel program at Ogden. Twice a week he takes charge of the exercises and conducts a good old fashioned "sing." The students have given their hearty support and a movement is now on foot to secure suitable song books.

Alumni Notes

The graduates of '22 have found it not such a long jump from college days to the sterner side of life. However, they have all taken to the new order of things like a fish does to water and are making good. We have heard from the following since the opening of this session.

Foeman Rudd is now Professor of English and History in the Bowling Green High School. Besides his regular work, Mr. Rudd is teaching the High School football team.

William C. Lee, the honor graduate of last year's class, is now Professor of Natural Science in our own school. As we all come in contact with Mr. Lee every day, there is no doubt but what his work is of the highest caliber.

Carrol James, our former Editor-in-Chief, is now attending the Bowling Green Business University.

Conrad Tiehenor (Old Sorrel Top) has settled down for good and is now in the retail shoe business.

John Adsit has accepted a position as Professor of Languages in the Jamestown High School at Jamestown, Louisiana.

Presley Perkins is continuing his studies at Vanderbilt.

Lively Holland can now be found at Davidson Bros, the local wholesale grocers.

Ward Sumpter is at the University of Florida, Gainesville, Florida. He is taking some advanced work in science and will have his B. S. next spring. Ward is also teaching a class and assisting in the University laboratory several hours a week.

Editorial

Well, here we are again. Just as strong as we ever were, and reary to do anything in our power to boost old Ogden. We intend to give the school a live, newsy paper and if it is possible to surpass the efforts of last year, we will try to do so.

Our finances are in splendid shape and as our little paper is published and financed by the student body, we should be proud of this fact. The subscriptions are coming in thick and fast. Faculty subscriptions have reached the one hundred per cent mark and the student body is very near that goal.

In order that we may have a better paper, we must have more articles turned in from the students. Here is a good opportunity for everyone of you to display that spark of journalism that you have fostered so long in secret. Here is a good chance for you to see your own work in print. And no outsider need ever know who wrote it. Just hand it to a member of the Staff, and, if it is suitable, it will be published without any undue notoriety.

As to our policy for the year—the Cardinal was published during the last session on the basis that it was a mirror of the happenings of the College, and it tried to portray them truthfully and colorfully with apologies to no one. This is the policy of the present Staff and we are hoping that we may carry it out to the letter.

DIRTY DOZEN ORGANIZES.

For many years the Dirty Dozen has been a source of terror to unruly Preps, and this organization has already held one of its mysterious meetings at their secret clubhouse and the following men were elected as members and officers:

Hill Chief
Lashmit Assistant Chief
Bray First Lieutenant
Kinslow Second Lieutenant
J. Smith Scribe
Vale Bar Tender
Williams Designer
Huffman Mascot
D. Smith Waterboy
Gilliam Chauffeur
Shelton Social Entertainer
Chandler Minister

About forty candidates were present at the meeting and everyone strove valiantly for one of the twelve seats around the table, but after the smoke cleared away, the gentlemen named above were found to be comfortably seated. In the much sought for places. However, the remaining candidates have not lost hope and if one of the twelve fails to keep his pledge, they will have another trial, providing they abide by the rules in the meantime.

The only business transacted was the adoption of the motto, "Where we light we Sting," which is derived from the favorite name of the organization, THE YELLOW JACKETS. As near as can be learned, the constitution runs as follows:

Preamble.

We, the members of the Dirty Dozen, believing that the rights of the College men are in danger, have banded ourselves together in order that these rights may be upheld. To better prepare ourselves for the task of suppressing Prepism, we have agreed to abide by and enforce the following rules and regulations:

Section A (Personal.)

Rule 2. Each member shall grow a moustache and sideburns, in order that he may be distinguished from a common student.

Rule 2. He shall foster an air of dignity that will not wilt in the presence of non-members, seniors or other upper-classmen.

Rule 3. Each member must be present at each meeting or he will be treated as a Freshman.

SECTION B. (Suppression of Prepism.)

Rule 1. No Prep shall be allowed to pass an upper classman until he has spoken to him. If the upper classman refuses to return the salutation, the Prep must stand, cap in hand, until the superior is out of sight.

Rule 2. No Prep shall be allowed to loaf at Noell's.

Rule 3. No Prep is allowed on the streets after seven P. M.

Rule 4. Any Prep must give in to an upper classman if he and the upper classman have a date with the same girl.

Rule 5. No Prep shall be allowed to enter the College building by way of the front door.

Rule 6. No Prep shall be allowed to break any College rules.

Amendments.

Rule 7. Any student violating any rule governing him will be dealt with by the members of this organization in the manner they think best.

Prof. Ayres: "I am heartily in favor of it."

Ogden has opened.

But I notice that so many of the boys consider that the President is a kind of wild man and that he will take a special delight in punishing the more or less guilty victims. This is not true. The Doctor stands ready and willing to talk over the case. He will always treat you right.

And then, with the opening of school comes the question of whether to come out for the football team. Along with this question comes the problem of College Spirit. In my opinion College Spirit is a much over used phrase. The way it is used every time anyone in position wants a disagreeable job done is perfectly sickening. It owes its effectiveness to the fact that to say a boy lacks college spirit is as bad as to say that the same fellow is a coward, or that he is yellow. Of course no red-blooded person is going to stand for that, so the dirty work is done. There is in every institution someone who loves that institution so much that he will offer to do the uninteresting details. This person or group of persons will do the work better than any number of persons who are forced into it by the fear of public opinion. Now, you think that I am not in favor of this College Spirit. Well, I am. Without it no college can exist. But to me it means the privilege of working for my college in the way that I can to the best advantage. So much for College Spirit. Now, about coming out for the team. Sure, come out, if you can without seriously interfering with your regular school work.

Some of the boys seem to lose the point of a college education in the pursuit of the sports. Primarily you are there to further your knowledge of this world. After you have arranged your work and find that you have a lot of time on your hands, I suggest that you go to see one of the various managers. That is if you are not built to play football. Now the manager has under him some man that is going to fall down in the pursuit of his duties. So, if you have any extra time, one of the managers is sure to need your services.

Woman's most powerful weapons are: tears, timidity, beauty, powder, smiles, rouge, simplicity, appreciation, silk stockings, kisses, tenderness, sympathy, sighs and a gingham dress. Man's most powerful weapon: another woman.

Confessions of

An Associate Editor

"Yes, I know that you can't write anything that is worth reading, but you have to write something or I'll fire you."

"But, just listen to a little reason. If I write anything for that old paper, I'll have to skip Football practice."

"I don't care if you have to skip your own wedding. You must have me an article ready by morning, or Rhetoric won't meet tomorrow."

So with this dire threat, my erstwhile friend, Alvis Temple, slammed the door. He slammed the door to all the pleasure that awaits the school boy. He did more. He willfully denied me all the pleasure of being pounded by my pals on the football field. And instead of this, he left me without a thought in my poor old head.

As I sat chewing the end off a perfectly good pencil, there came to me a daring thought. If I could only do it. The more I thought about the idea, the better it seemed to me. At last I had the whole thing fixed in my mind. And when I got through with that Alvis Temple, why his own mother would be ashamed to see him come home. So I grabbed the still unchewed remnant of my new pencil, and started to put down in black and white the wonderful scheme. It took both sides of three sheets of paper to expose to the public the innermost workings of the cruel Editor-in-Chief. But when I had finished, I had to admit that the thing was good. It was excellent. In fact it was so cruelly critical that I, the injured one, even crossed out the last and cruellest paragraph. So I laid it away and waited for the morning.

The next day, I presented the paper to Alvis, happy in the prospect of again teaching my Rhetoric class. Temple slowly read the paper. Then he turned his glassy eye on me. He gazed at me long and steadily, then, "You poor prune I only wanted a hundred and fifty words."

Faculty Notes

All professors are delighted with the prospects in the various departments in the school. The enrollment in all classes is good and the students are all hard at work.

Dr. Edgerton has instituted a course in Pedagogy in his department. Any Ogden student may now secure the State's Teacher's Life Certificate upon graduation.

By changing some text books and adding a small library of his own to that of the College, Professor Palmer has increased the scope of the History and Social Science Department very much.

Professor Hilary, by the addition of Greek I, now has a list of languages to offer that is not equaled in many larger institutions.

Prof. Ayres' mathematics classes are proceeding in the same systematic and efficient way that characterized his work last year.

Professor Lee, is a marvel when it comes to efficiency. We should be proud of the smoothness with which our Natural Science Department is run. This is the largest Department in the College and our laboratories are better equipped than ever before.
